

DESIGNATED SUPPORT PERSON (DSP) FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Can any patient have a DSP?

Yes. Any patient who requires emotional or physical support, help with their care, or assistance with decision making may have a DSP. Not all patients require additional support. If you feel your loved one may benefit from having a DSP, please speak to the patient's nurse manager.

Define emotional/psychological support.

This type of support can simply include being present. A family member's presence can assist in calming and reassuring a patient who may be agitated and scared.

What are the differences between a DSP and a social visitor?

- DSPs are active partners in care and can provide additional support to the patient. This support can include physical assistance or emotional care and can be very specific to the patient's needs.
- DSPs also can provide key patient information and assist with decision making.
- DSPs are not limited to visiting during general visiting hours and do not have to maintain distance between themselves and the patient they are supporting.
- Social visitors play an important role but do not participate as DSPs, who are active partners in care.
- A social visitor is not essential and is not involved in supporting the patient or assisting with emotional or physical support, patient care or decision making.
- Social visitors are only permitted to visit during visiting hours.
- Social visitors are required to practice hand hygiene, maintain distance from the patient and staff, and wear a mask when required.
